Session Title: Emerging trends in Machine Learning and its Applications

Session Chair: Dr. Sandeep Singh Sengar, SRM University-AP, Amaravati, Andhra Pradesh, India

Abstract: The ETMLA 2020 special session offers an excellent international forum for sharing information, results in theory, approach and emerging predictive models for different applications. Machine Learning especially deep learning is efficient for handling complex prediction models due to their outstanding performance in handling large scale data sets with uniform characteristics. The goal of this session is to bring together researchers, practitioners, academicians, and industrialists from diverse disciplines related to machine learning to share ideas, algorithms on current as well as future use of machine learning, image processing and computer vision algorithms in real-life. The main idea of the special session is what more can be achieved with the help of current technology. In this session, all the participants will get a chance to interact and establish professional relations for future collaboration.

Topics of Interest: Computer Vision, Machine Learning, Deep Learning, Classification, Image/Video Processing, Clustering, Expert System, Robotics, Human Computer Interaction, Segmentation Techniques, Sentiment Analysis, Biometrics, Computational Intelligence, Brain-Machine Interface, Medical Diagnosis, Augmented/Virtual Reality, Mobile Robots, Telerobotics, Smart Cities, Intelligent Transportation, Data Science, Agents and Multi-agent Systems, Context-aware pervasive systems, Medical Imaging
